Cards B + C. Letterhead A + B.

Dear operator,

Letterhead A leans operator-quiet — your name and your business sit top-left in the master crest, and the page is yours from there. Generous body well, no design tax. The tagline waits at the foot, signing off on every page you send.

Margins hold at 0,85 inch on all sides; body type stays at 11/16 Inter Regular for printed correspondence, 10/15 for export to PDF. Use the second-page template (no header rule) for letters that run beyond one sheet.

Sincerely,

Marcus Lloyd

Run the business, not the busywork.

MAY 23, 2026 • CORRESPONDENCE

To whom it may concern,

Letterhead B carries more ceremony — the wordmark and mark center themselves above the page, framing the body well like a masthead. Use this for outward-facing correspondence: investor letters, partnership memos, anything you want to feel formal but not stuffy.

The minimal footer keeps the page clean: just the domain in the dead center, terracotta lockup. Tagline isn't repeated — the masthead earns the silence.

Sincerely,

SCS AI

One language. Every feed.

Three Instagram square posts, three story templates, two LinkedIn cards, an X header, a Facebook cover, and the profile mark — all derived from one type and color rhythm. Each template has a default text payload you can edit live.

Lock this wave, I'll build the guide.

The brand guide PDF (logo usage, color, type, tagline, voice, sample applications) is the final pass. Per the brief, it gets built once everything else locks — so it can include the cards, letterheads, social, waitlist, and signatures you've already approved.
